The train driver loved to talk about the animals in the zoo.
She liked to be the one to do the talking.
But she didn't seem to mind when her parrot repeated some of her words.
The driver said that giraffes are the tallest animals in the world.
She said that they eat plants.
It's a good thing they are so tall, since they really love the leaves at the top of the trees.

Ziggy wanted to show the parrot that she could talk too.
When the driver said giraffes especially like leaves, the parrot repeated the word 'leaves'.
Ziggy rushed over and said, "Green leaves!"
The parrot squawked at Ziggy.
That's when the driver told the birds to be quiet.
She wanted to start talking about the hippos.

The dreamy milkmaid

A milkmaid was walking home from the meadow. She had just finished milking her cows. She carried a bucket of milk on her head. She was lost in thought.

She thought, "I will make cream and butter out of this milk. Then after selling it, I will buy eggs. When the eggs hatch, I shall have a good chicken farm."

She went on thinking, "Then, I shall sell some of my chickens and buy a fine dress. Seeing me in my new clothes, all the boys will admire me. Then I will pick the richest one and marry him."

Lost in her daydreams, she forgot about the bucket on her head. She tossed her hair and the bucket fell off her head, spilling all the milk.

"Oh no!" she cried, "I have lost it all!"

Then John had another idea.
He took a snowball and started to roll it in the snow.
As he rolled it, more and more snow stuck to it.
It grew bigger and bigger.
Everyone helped him.
They made lots of snow balls in different sizes.
Some were big, some were medium-size, some were small,
and some were tiny.

John piled the balls on top of each other.
He started with a big ball of snow.
He put a medium size ball on top of the big ball.
He put a small ball on top of the medium one.
With three balls of snow, he made a snowman.
They all worked together and soon there were four snow people.
There was a big snow woman.
There was a medium size snowman.
There was a small snow girl.
There was a tiny snow boy.
